Product Description

This high-quality box by Delock contains various crimp connectors for high-frequency technology for connecting components. SMA connectors are often used in the fields of telecommunications, data communication by means of antenna technology, but also in automation. Thanks to the screw lock, they are mechanically very robust despite their small size. In contrast to SMA connectors, RP-SMA, or reverse SMA, has a hollow tube and no metal pin. The RP-SMA connector is often used for antenna connections on WLAN devices. The SMB connector is smaller than the SMA, but is used for the same applications as the larger SMA connector.
